SCOTT MCQUADE OF EMCOR SERVICES TRIMECH WINS COMMUNITY SERVICE AWARD

Cited for Work on Behalf of Fostering Children

POMPTON PLAINS, NJ – November 17, 2006 – Scott McQuade, a Construction Manager with Trimech Corp., a leading provider of facilities systems and services in the New Jersey area, has received the 2006 EMCOR Diamond Award for outstanding community service.

Trimech is a subsidiary of EMCOR Group, Inc., (NYSE: EME) a Fortune 500® leader in mechanical and electrical construction, energy infrastructure and facilities services for a diverse range of businesses globally. The annual EMCOR Diamond Award was created by EMCOR in 1998 to recognize the accomplishments of Company employees who go “beyond the call of duty.”

“Diamond Award winners exhibit exemplary performance in charitable or community endeavors,” noted Frank T. MacInnis, Chairman and CEO of EMCOR Group, Inc. “These individuals’ exemplary performance is so special and admirable that it enriches us all. Scott McQuade’s long history of service to the special needs of children in his community sets an example that everyone can admire.”

A Trimech employee since 2000, Scott serves as an emergency care volunteer for the New Jersey government agency DYFS (Division of Youth and Family Services). He and his wife Bonnie are depended upon for assistance in emergency situations requiring safe places for children to stay. They are one of only a few families in Northern New Jersey who will take children in the middle of the night. Over the past four years, the McQuades have answered many such calls and have fostered at least 22 children in need.

The McQuades are also pioneering a grass roots effort in their community to increase awareness of the need that exists for abused children to have a safe home environment in order to heal emotionally. They are working with DYFS to arrange a foster care training program to be held in their hometown of West Milford, thus making training more accessible to those who wish to help.

“Scott inspires us all by giving his time and energy selflessly in helping to provide children with the fundamental needs that most of us take for granted,” said Scott Smith, Vice President of Trimech. “He demonstrates every day the real meaning of caring for others.”
